Dem Pedro Plants a Tree. When the emperor of Brazil was asked to add his signature to the many distinguished ones which adorn the pages of the visitors' book of the Grand Opera, in Paris, he modestly inscribed himself as "Don Pedro & Alcantarn, foreign member of the Academy of Science." His majesty, if not exactly an emperor among savants, may fairly claim to be a savant among emperors, and he has passed a great part of his time in Paris in the society of his brother savants. Astronomy is his favorite science, and he spent some bours with M. Camille Flammariou in his ob-servatory at Juvisy. Mme. Flammarion begged him to plant a tree in the park of the observatory as a souvenir of his visit. "With the greatest pleasure, madame," answered the emperor. "But you must let me do everything—the digging as well as the planting— myself. I will show you that I am capable of earning my bread at a pinch;" and taking the spade out of the gardener's hands, he set to work on his task, which he performed in an expeditious and workman like manner. - New Orleans Times Democrat.

They Grow Corn in Georgia.

It is said the corn is so rank, dark and green on the Commanuga bottoms that the light from the fireflies can be seen flickering brough its somber shade, even when the sun is high in the heavens. An old farmer tells a good one about a fellow who lost his way in one of these wast, dark forests of corn and was utterly unable to extricate himself. An exploring party, with funterns, went in search of him. When, at last, "the lost was found," he was discovered in the top of a tall cornstalk astraddle of an ear of corn, where he had been watching for the last wenty-four hours for the sun to rise -Dal-I ton (Ga.) Citizen

"You would think that in this age of the world there was no man such a fogy as not to be up with the ordinary rules and customs of hotel life." I had been talking with the night clerk of the Tre-mont. He continued: "An old man came in to-night carrying his valise, to which he clung as though it held all he had in the world. The bell boy over there offered to take it, but the old man ordered him to stand back. Then he approached me and said he wanted to go to bed. I saw that he was a well meaning old gentleman and unused to city customs. I asked him if he wanted a room pretty high. He looked at me and said he didn't want to go where he couldn't get out if snything happened.
'And I don't want to be put in a bed with anybody else, nuther! he exclaimed. 'Want a bath?' I asked. At this he grew furious, and said he had a good wash just before he left home, and he didn't think he was filthy yet, but he would probably need a bath, he said, by the time he got ready to leave this tavern. I thought that as one on me.

"I persuaded him to register, and then called the bell boy to show him up. The old fellow objected. He said he didn't want no nigger prowlin' around the halls with him. To please him I went with him, and we got into the elevator. It is a fact that the old fellow then grew speechless, and when we reached the landing on the fourth floor he asked me if there was no other way of getting to the room. 'I'd rather climb up a ladder from the outside,' he said, 'than to git into the box agin. Sposin' that rope was to break?' Having reached his room he took me by the hand and said, 'Gooby,' in a warm hearted way, and then asked: 'I reckon hearted way, and then asked: 'I reckon you know John Wentworth?' I said I did. 'Well,' he said, 'mebbe John'll come prowlin' 'round here lookin' for me be-fore I get up. If he does let him come up. I hain't seen John for nigh on to eleven years—when I beat him on a calf trade.' And he shook my hand again. I came back to the office and felt better. We laugh at such people in this age of the world, but they are the salt of the earth nd the article is getting scarce in the market."—Chicago Mail.

In a Chinese Hospital. In one of the most crowded thorough fares of the Chinese quarter of Shanghai there has stood for forty years a free native hospital, mainly supported by the Euro-pean community. Very strange its wards looked first to English visitors. The pa-tients bring their own bedding, consisting of a bamboo mat and a wadded quilt. Those who can move about are the only regular attendants of those who cannot. The house surgeon and dispenser is a Christian Chinaman, for thirty years con-nected with the hospital and one of the first converts of a missica school. Yearly about 800 patients pass through the wards, and the proportion of deaths is small. Last year there were fifty-six, and in the dispensary more than 22,000 cases were

From very far distances many of the poor suffering creatures come, and back to their far off homes many a healed one has carried a blessing greater than bodily healing; for we believe that nowhere, at home or abroad, could better proof be found than in the Shanghai hospital of the benefit of combining medical and Gos-pel work. Daily the waiting room, seated for 300, is crowded with men, women and children long before the dispensing hour, and daily an English missionary, as conversant with their language as his own, sets before this waiting multitude the word of life. "I believe," writes a Christian physician, who for some years had the oversight of this work, "that the Chinese undergo more suffering for want of medical knowledge than any other nation in the world. In an institution like this. almost daily under a good physician may the blind receive sight, the deaf hear, the lame walk."-The Quiver.

The Sons of Their Fathers.

A gentleman who has long been a resiof Maine and New Hampshire was speaking the other day about the degen-eracy of the young men in those states. He want back over the whole history of life of the pioneers and their independence of everybody and everything. It was amid such surroundings that Nathaniel Hawthorne grew up in Maine and Daniel Webster in New Hampshire. Hawthorne was from Bowdoin college and Webster was from Dartmouth college. Each of these institutions has made the exploits of its notable son a part of its stock in trade. But my friend declares that in the case of both Webster and Hawthorne it was not the institution of learning but the early surroundings that made each man what he was. The third generation, the sons of these two and other distinguished men, seems to have subsided completely except in the case of Julian Hawthorne. The study is an interesting one and it might be extended to other parts of the country. For instance, Joshua M. Giddings and Benjamin F. Wade were sons of pioneers in Ohio, but no one ever hears of their sons in these days. -New York Graphic.

Sanitary science has worked much good, but it has disseminated much nonsense. Now it is the manufactured article which is big with the germs of death; now the water; new the air; now the milk. If half that has been written of these subjects were the truth, there would be no further need for agitation. All the people would have been dead long ago. As a matter of fact, purity is an essential in any article of popular consumption. Everybody knows this, and, as a rule, an effort is made to procure that which is pure. When such end cannot be accompiished, sickness and perhaps death may result. But the theory that everything known is full of germs of fatality seems incompatible with the fact that people continue to live.-Omaha Herald. The Ebedive's Charming Wife.

A German lady who recently was admitted into the presence of the khedive's wife describes her in The Vienna Neue Freie Pirsse as toliows: "She is still young, at most 24 to 26 years old, and has an extremely charming face. Her whole appearance would be bewitching were she not an Oriental, and therefore, young as she is, already too stout to be perfectly beautiful, according to European notions. She has large dark eyes, with long, heavy eyelashes, a dazzling complexion-to which art has contributed nothing—and the loveliest little mouth and teeth. Her neck and arms, as well as her small, fat hands, glittered with diamonds, and her dark, fashtonably arranged hair was encircled with wreaths of precious stones, and yet somehow her toilet seemed not overladen. On the left side of her white surah dress, whose long trail was completely covered with rich lace, she were a broche of fresh crange leaves and white roses, and below it a miniature of the khedive set in diamonds; on a little table lay her golden tabatiere, with the signature of Abdul Ariz in diamonds and a large fly flap of estrich feathers, whose handle glittered and sparkled with the elightest motion."-Boston Transcript.
